

LINDBERGH NOW ON INSPECTION TOUR OF ROUTE

Delayed in Camden, N. J., Owing to Excepcionally Heavy Fog

OPENS T. A. T. ROUTE

First Stop Scheduled for Harrisburg; Poor Weather Conditions

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 23.—(INS).— Col. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at the Central Airport here at 9.35 a. m. today on his inspection tour of the trans-continental Western Air Corporation's passenger and air mail route. Five minutes later he took off again in his huge Ford tri-motored plane for Harrisburg, the next stop on the tour.

Pilots "Andy" Andrews and Joe Russell, of the T. A. T.-Maddux Lines, accompanied the Lone Eagle.

While the big plane was refueled for its hop over the Allegheny Mountains, "graveyard of the night mail," to Pittsburgh, Lindbergh alighted, inspected the plane and then took the controls for the westward flight.

At 11.10 a. m. the plane roared down the runway and climbed into the air.
Lindbergh headed west toward Pittsburgh, where he was to land at Bettis Field before proceeding to Columbus, Ohio, on the last leg of the inspection flight.

Poor flying conditions obtained between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, where Lindbergh's next stop was scheduled. Low ceilings, ranging from 2,000 feet at Brookville to 5,000 feet at Bellefonte, and poor visibility of one-half mile at Brookville to 4 miles at Bellefonte were reported by weather bureau officials.

The Harrisburg-Pittsburgh lap, across the hazardous ranges of the Allegheny Mountains, constituted the most dangerous part of the inspection tour.
Pittsburgh and surrounding towns were blanketed in a heavy fog.

Eastern Star Chapter Conducts Hallowe'en Party

The members of the Eastern Star Chapter, their families and friends, enjoyed a Hallowe'en party last evening in the Travel Club Home. Most of those attending were masked, and prizes were given for the following costumes:

Most original dress, Charles Rathke; best dressed, Mrs. Rebecca Miller, Miss Zoe Gould; comic dress, Percy Earle and Mrs. Jacob Schmidt, Sr.

After the unmasking, a pleasant evening was spent playing games, which were followed by refreshments of cider, doughnuts, ginger cakes and candy.

The room was prettily decorated in the Hallowe'en colors, orange and black; while skeletons, skulls and lanterns were seen here and there around the room. About 75 persons attended the party.

State College Extension Courses Planned Here

A representative of the Department of Engineering Extension of the Pen-sylvania State College was in Bristol this week for the purpose of organizing evening classes, here, which will be open to men and women who desire additional training in technical, business or cultural subjects.

The Pennsylvania State College, which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this Friday and Saturday, has maintained the Engineering Extension Department for more than 20 years.
Its growth has been phenomenal during its life. It now serves approximately 10,000 men and women yearly, which is several times the students enrolled at State College.

Classes will be held at the Wood street school building Monday and Thursday evenings from seven until nine-thirty o'clock. Courses in airplane stress analysis, engineering aerodynamics, theory of airplanes, and engines, mechanics, mathematics, mechanical drawing, and life print reading have already been listed for offering. Additional courses will be organized should the demand prove sufficient for classes.

State Legislative appropriations to the Extension Department help defray the fees for all subjects.

A survey of all local industries was made by the college representative who was pleased with the enthusiasm with which the news of the school was received.

Information concerning the courses will be given, and enrollments accepted on November 3, 4, and 5 at Wood street school.

COAL STOLEN

Tons of coal have been stolen from the cars on the siding of the P. R. R. here during the past two days. The hoppers of the cars are dumped and the fuel has been carried away in every conceivable sort of conveyance.

MEET TONIGHT

There will be a meeting of the Mill Street Business Men's Association tonight.

STATE GOVERNMENTAL BUDGET SYSTEM

The Courier herewith presents an informative article written by Arthur P. Townsend, Langhorne, Budget Secretary to the Hon. John S. Fisher, Governor of the State of Pennsylvania.

The story is taken from the current issue of a monthly publication, "Pennsylvania Progress," which is issued by Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce.

The article will be published in daily installments until completed.

By Arthur P. Townsend
Budget Secretary of Pennsylvania

Governor Submits Budget To General Assembly

Not later than four weeks after the organization of the General Assembly, the Governor presents to each member a printed copy of his Budget containing his recommendations for appropriations, estimates of receipts which he thinks conservative, statements of receipts and expenditures during past periods, present liabilities on account of unexpended appropriations, brief references to tax laws, statements of condition of the Sinking Fund, and any other pertinent and useful information.

The Governor's Budget Recommendations are only a guide for the General Assembly. The Budget presents accurate information as to the financial experience of the State during the past periods and is used by the General Assembly as a handbook for this information. The forecasts and recommendations for its future serve the General Assembly as a working guide.

There are four committees of the General Assembly upon whom devolve the responsibility for studying the Governor's Budget and the State's financial needs. The Finance Committee of the Senate and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, within whose province falls the subject of taxes, study the estimates of receipts. The Appropriation Committees of the Senate and House of Representatives study the recommended appropriations. All of these committees delve into their respective subjects thoroughly, calling upon every interested governmental agency to clear up and explain any phases of their estimates of receipts or appropriation needs about which the General Assembly may have any question.

Upon their report rests the final action of the General Assembly as to the tax law changes and the appropriations.

PINCHOT CONTINUES ATTERBURY ATTACK

Rail Head Again Target As Forester Campaigns In State

PREDICTS HIS ELECTION

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for United States Senator, last night denied a breach has developed between him and Gifford Pinchot, the party's candidate for Governor, over the attitude of President Hoover in the State campaign.

Secretary Davis, in a statement at Washington, said he will do as much campaigning as possible until the election on November 4 and added he expects to appear on the same platform with Pinchot at a rally in Pittsburgh next Saturday.

Pinchot yesterday visited Butler and renewed his attack on Atterbury.
"This time we have the same old issue we had in the Roosevelt election," said Pinchot. "It is the fight of the plain people against the big interests. Atterbury, for instance, is trying to coerce his employees to vote against their will, a thing which no decent American would try to do."

"General Edward Martin, Republican State chairman, a few days ago called him a general who has quit under fire. The big fellows who have been treating the public unfairly are lined up with Hemphill. Keep this clear in mind: They propose to buy the election, but they won't succeed.
Neither $500,000 nor $5,000,000 can buy the up-state vote."

"The prohibition question will be settled not in Pennsylvania, but at Washington," declared Pinchot in the Butler Court House. "I know you people are dry in Butler county. You must be acquainted with the great issue which has emerged from the attempt of John M. Hemphill and his Liberal Party backers to masquerade behind the wet issue."

Pinchot addressed the Republican county committee at a dinner in the Sterling Club prior to the indoor demonstration. He blasted General W.
Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who joined an influential group of Republicans bent upon supporting Hemphill. "Atterbury quickly fires an employee who takes a drink, but spends most of his own time to get a drink more conveniently for himself," said Pinchot to the 154 county committeemen and women.

"The Philadelphia Gang is trying to extend the gang control system up State wherever the Pennsylvania Railroad goes." Senator Painter capped a long introductory speech of Pinchot with the remark: "There are no desertions from the Republican Party in Butler county."

In clearing up these questions relating to the Executive Department, the Budget Secretary is often called upon to help. In rendering such aid, he is acting for the Governor and under his direction as head of the Executive Department.

Appropriation bills forwarded by the General Assembly to the Governor for his approval are of two kinds, nominally known as "deficiency appropriations" and "appropriations." Deficiency appropriations are supplementary to appropriations covering the biennium then current. Often it is found that the money a previous session of the General Assembly had provided is, on account of changed conditions or emergencies, insufficient to meet the demands of adequate government. Every session of the General Assembly soon after its organization is requested to make deficiency appropriations to continue the work of government until the beginning of the next appropriation period. Such deficiency appropriations as the Governor countenances are always recommended in his Budget. The term "appropriations" without the prefix term "deficiency" is used to designate grants of money by the General Assembly for the biennial period next succeeding which begins on June 1st following the session.

Deficiency appropriation bills reach the Governor during the early part of the session of the General Assembly.
He has power of veto over them conferred by Article IV, Section 16 of the Constitution. The amounts he approves are a first claim against the available funds as estimated in the budget estimates of receipts.

Bills covering appropriations may reach the Governor at any time during the Session, whereupon he takes such action as is necessitated under Article IV, Section 16 of the Constitution.
However, the bulk of appropriation bills, including the general appropriation bill, which carries the amount for general government, reach the Governor toward the end of the Session due to the immense amount of study and consideration which must be given them by the General Assembly. It is a necessary part of the budget system that most of the appropriation bills reach the Governor so that he can consider them individually and in total at one time.

After considering each bill individually, he regards the total, taking into consideration the deficiency appropriation bills and sporadic appropriation

CONVALESCENT HOME TO OPEN ON NOVEMBER 22

Donations Will Be Received On Opening Date of Langhorne Institution

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

LANGHORNE, Oct. 23.—The Philadelphia Convalescent Home for Children, here, is making arrangements for winter activities and will hold open house Saturday, November 22nd, when interested friends are cordially invited, and donations of various kinds will be received, the same as last year.
There will be a musical program, and a few speakers will be heard. The program will be announced later.

Twenty-six children were cared for at the home last winter, and all were benefited by the splendid care they received under the supervision of Dr.
Henry Lovett and Dr. S. L. Ridge, of Langhorne. One child whose hearing had become very much affected was removed to the Pennsylvania Hospital for an operation under the care of Dr.
Curtis C. Eves, a member of the eminent board of consultants. The child has improved greatly in health and strength and the deafness has entirely disappeared. Children admitted to the home have the advantage of the best medical advice in this part of the country as the board of consultants is composed of pediatricians prominent in Philadelphia and vicinity. In fact some of them are internationally known. These skillful physicians are giving their services gratis to the convalescent home, for undernourished children from Philadelphia and Bucks County.

During the summer months the children were taken to the Ocean City Seashore Home for Babies at Ocean City, N. J., where thirty-six children were treated. And a number of them requiring longer convalescent care will be admitted to the home at Langhorne during the coming season until they are strong enough to be sent to their own homes. Cases of rickets require long convalescent care. Those who are familiar with the disease know that unsightly deformities develop if it is neglected in an early age.
Malnutrition also affects the mentality. If the body is undernourished the brain cannot develop properly. Many cases of arrested mental development are due to this condition. The importance of correcting faulty nutrition cannot be too strongly emphasized.

The homes at Ocean City and Langhorne specialize with that particular type of cases, and have had great success along that line. The first two years of a child's life are vitally important to the physical and mental development. This is a fact that the general public has given little thought to

Tendered Shower By Fellow Office Employees

A number of employees from Thomas L. Leedom Co.'s office and their friends gave a dinner and surprise the Wright-Inn Restaurant, and was followed later with dancing and entertainment at the home of Miss Young.

The honor guest received a beautiful table lamp and end table and Cogswell chair from her fellow employees of the carpet firm.

Those present were the Misses Cardie Rapp, Winifred Kelly, Ethel Russell, Mary McGee, Virginia Young, Mary McFadden, Mr. and Mrs. C. W.
Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Elberson, Miss Hattie Randall, Mrs. Susan Young and Samuel Rodgers.

NUPTIAL CEREMONY IS PERFORMED IN BRISTOL

S. Wilson Black Takes As His Bride Miss Edith Atkinson, Riverton

WILL RESIDE HERE

A beautiful wedding, interesting to many Bristolians occurred yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in the Bristol Presbyterian Church, when Miss Edith Atkinson, daughter of Mr.
J. Atkinson, of Riverton, N. J., became the bride of S. Wilson Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Black, of Cedar street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Kane, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bride party entered the church; and prior to the wedding procession Mrs.
Albert Gorman, of Riverton, rendered two vocal selections, "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Weagley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in a model of white bridal satin, fashioned with a sleeveless, close-fitting bodice with deep v-shape neck line, and a long, full, flaring skirt. She wore lace mitts, white moire slippers, and silk stockings, and her veil of tulle was bordered with orange blossoms and fell from a cap, fastened with a bandeau of lace and orange blossoms.
She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Doris Small, of Lakewood, N.
J., sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor. She wore a model of nile green satin, fashioned with a sleeveless, close-fitting bodice and v-shape neck-line. The long skirt was edged with tulle, and trimmed with ruffles of self material. Her hat was an off-the-face model of green velvet, trimmed at the back with a flat velvet bow. She wore slippers of the same tone and carried an arm spray of yellow chrysanthemums.

Miss Sara Milnor, of Bath road, attended as bridesmaid and was attired in a gown of orchid satin, fashioned
with a sleeveless, close-fitting bodice, with a v-shaped neckline, which was trimmed with a cape in the back. The long, full flaring skirt fell in graceful folds. Her hat of orchid velvet was trimmed with a bow, and carried an exact copy of the one worn by the matron of honor. Her lace mitts and satin slippers were of a matching tone, and she carried an arm spray of yellow chrysanthemums.

John Black, brother of the groom, served as best man. The ushers included William Rue, of Bath street, cousin of the groom, and Roland Atkinson, of Riverton, brother of the bride.

Mrs. S. W. Black, mother of the groom, wore a black chiffon velvet dress and hat to match. Black fur neck-piece, gloves and slippers, with egg-shell stockings, completed her costume.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Keystone Hotel for the bride party and the immediate families. Covers were laid for forty guests. The room was decorated with autumn leaves, and bouquets of chrysanthemums graced the tables.

The bride and groom will enjoy a honeymoon trip to New York and Boston. For her traveling costume Mrs.
Black wore a blue chiffon dress with accessories to match.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs.
Black will reside at 256 Madison street.

The bride was born in Philadelphia, but has been a resident in Riverton for the past seven years. Up to the time of her marriage, she was employed by the Curtis Publishing Company, in Philadelphia. The groom is a graduate of Bristol high school, Pierce's Business School, Philadelphia, and now holds a position at the Bristol Trust Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Black were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.
Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Philadelphia, Holmesburg, Carversville, Stratford, Pa., and Riverton, Clinton and Palmyra, N. J.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

A Hallowe'en dance will be given by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in their hall on Corson street tomornish music for the dancing, and a pleasant evening is anticipated. Anyone attending the dance is privileged to mask, and prizes will be awarded for fancy, comic and most original dress. All are invited to attend this

STUDENT OFFICERS TO BE INSTALLED FRIDAY

Meeting of Student Council is Scheduled at Bensalem
High School

PUPILS ARE ACTIVE

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP PUBLIC SCHOOL, Cornwells Heights, Oct. 23.— The newly elected officers of the Bensalem township high school student council will be installed at the next meeting of the student body in assembly. Assembly period is on Friday at 2.45. At that time the newcomers will take their places as the new rulers of the student body for the year 1930-31.

The "Bensalemite" was given to the pupils of the high school on Monday.
The issue contains the constitution of the Bensalem Athletic Association in full detail. The reports of all the classes are also given. Humor is predominating throughout the edition, and as a whole it is a huge success.

On Thursday afternoon during activities period the girls of B. T. H. S. held their end-ball tournament. The winners were, as can readily be expected, the seniors. There are two halves left to play, but they will not be so important as to change the outlook as to the winners.

The girls are starting basketball practice during physical education period, and by so doing Miss Jennings, the girls' instructor, will be able to determine the best material for the coming season when Bensalem faces its opponents.

Last week found the first archery practice getting underway. Miss Sargeant, the coach of this new sport at Bensalem, is very well pleased with the outlook. Miss Sargeant hopes to have a wonderful team by the spring, when the tournaments will take place.

Friday afternoon found Bensalem students being dismissed a little earlier in order that they might attend the football game between Bensalem and Newtown. Many of the loyal Bensalem rooters did attend and saw a hard-fighting Bensalem team go down to defeat before a powerful Newtown eleven. Newtown was a heavier team than the locals and proved to be quite a task to hold down to the score they did receive. Bensalem men played very well considering the odds against them, and when the final whistle blew the score stood, Newtown, 27; Bensalem, 0. On Friday Bensalem team may have better luck when it plays the Langhorne H. S.

The activities of the various clubs of the Bensalem high school have not as yet rounded into form due to the fact that activities period which has been scheduled to take care of the work of the clubs and extra curricular activities, has been devoted entirely to the things that concern the entire student body. In the near future the Science, Latin and French clubs hope to get under way and present many interesting meetings to their members.

of the civil court term.

A jury in a case being tried before Judge Calvin S. Boyer was discharged after the Court allowed a motion that a compulsory non-suit be declared in the case of Mrs. Ella Godshall, widow of David Godshall, of Perkasio, who brought suit for $10,000 damages against Edgar W. Crouthamel, South Perkasio hotel owner.

Mrs. Godshall alleged that Croutha-mel sold her husband moonshine liquor that caused his death on February 9th, 1929, ten days after Godshall is alleged to have purchased liquor at the hotel.

Dr. N. B. Williams, of Perkasio, called as a witness for the plaintiff, testified that Godshall died from ulcers of the stomach and that the disease could have been caused by alcohol, among a number of other things.
Under cross-examination, Dr. Williams testified that in his opinion alcohol did not cause Godshall's death, but that he could not tell what caused the ulcers.

Upon motion by Harry E. Grim, Per-kasio, attorney for Crouthamel, that a compulsory non-suit be entered, Judge Boyer granted the motion. Mark Thatcher, Perkasio, attorney for the plaintiff, filed a motion to have the non-suit stricken off.

Judge Boyer announced his decision after Attorney Grim argued that it would not be safe or in the province of a jury of laymen to say whether Godshall was killed by alcohol when the doctor in the case could not positively say so himself. The defense attorney cited a number of cases in which it has been decided that positive evidence of the death must be shown in an expert manner before a jury can act on the question.

Mr. Thatcher argued that in this case there was testimony to show that Godshall had taken several drinks at the South Perkasio Hotel and had been taken home drunk in a taxicab from the hotel, and that he had taken nothing else that might have caused the ulcer condition in his stomach.

Judge Hiram H. Keller in No. 2 Court yesterday directed a compulsory non suit to be entered in the case of Charles Naylor, of Solebury township, against Salma Hensel, of Buckingham township.

Naylor started suit for damages against Mrs. Hensel after he had been taken into custody by Corporal Chas.
Rodgers, of the State Police, following a robbery at the Hensel home over a year ago when her daughter was beaten up.

It was testified that the defendant reported the robbery to the State Police and that Corporal Rodgers answered the call and questioned Mrs.
Hensel, asking her who had ever worked or been around the place. The woman, it was testified told the officer that "a man by the name of Charlie had been there and that he was a guard at the jail." The officer went to the county prison where Naylor was employed as a guard at the time and took Naylor to the Hensel home. Mrs.
Hensel then stated that she could not identify him by features but stated that "his voice sounded like the voice"

HIGH SPEED ROADS NEEDED

Just a few years ago governments and the people talked highways in terms of short routes between neighboring cities and county seats. Construction of trans-state highways was the next stage in this development. Interstate highways came in the natural course of events, followed closely by transcontinental highways.

Now there is before the Federal Government a plan to build a broad highway from coast to coast upon which slow and fast-moving vehicles would be separated and obstructions common to ordinary roads eliminated. The same program calls for border highways up and down both coasts and along the southern boundary.

Provision for the growth of interstate highway travel is intrinsically a part of Federal concern, when linked up with the carriage of the mails. The apportionments made to states for roads is recognition of the fact that the highways are national arteries.

An articulated road system across the continent, with feeders, is demanded by the needs of highway traffic, and the bill to provide this will serve admirably to clarify the features of doubt and difficulty involved in a Federal project of such magnitude. It is time to consider the necessity for such a road system and a basis for its financing.

Unless the government goes into the business of building wide through highways for high-speed motor traffic the public demand will force from the government franchises for privately-owned highways of this sort.

THE REMEDY MUST BE FOUND

A report issued by the American Road Builders' Association says, "The percentage of pedestrians killed in highway accidents is increasing each year." Evidently the highway is becoming a dangerous place for the fellow not on wheels.

The automobile has come to stay and whatever problems it develops must be solved. One of these grows out of the necessity of saving the lives of those who at times must cross the streets now almost entirely devoted to automobile traffic.

It is not sufficient to say, as does the report of the Road Builders' Association, "Generally the pedestrian himself is at fault in highway accidents in which he is involved." No person, either walking or riding, deliberately puts himself in peril. And if conditions exist whereby thousands of persons, either through carelessness or otherwise, lose their lives every year, those conditions must be removed. Particularly is the necessity made obvious when it is considered that more than 3,600 children of school age, who could not be expected to possess mature judgment, were killed during the past year.

The time will come when it will be difficult to make people believe that once our streets were filled with speeding automobiles, and pedestrians, including children, could cross only by scurrying among them at peril of their lives.

There isn't much wrong with a country where the people who pretend to be sophisticated, which means nine in each 10, feel embarrassed when somebody tells a rough joke.

"Where's your friend?"
"Ah—" the sound was like a smothered oath, "that is what I should like to know myself."

Jack entered and approached the table. The older man nodded and let him slip into his chair and give an order before he spoke.

"Well?"

Jack shrugged his shoulders. "Well—is it my fault if Paul bungled it? Check up on me! Everything I got was straight. They had the money in the country bank and he did take it to the works. The New York car was a decoy, as I told you. The man who slipped up is Paul."

"They have Paul?"

"What! Will he squeal?"

The older man was silent. Then he looked up and asked, "The girl? Does she suspect you?"

Jack shook his head. "I told her enough about him to keep her from believing anything he says about me."

The older man looked at him grimly. "Eat and come to the office by the back way. We're not done. Since the payroll's lost to us, you must get the cash through the girl."

Roberta was feeling a little lonely. Here where she used to be first, with her father and those within the house, Sir George seemed to have taken first place away from her. Even the servants watched for him, tried to anticipate his wishes, and as for her aunt and father, why, quite evidently as Aunt Aggy had said, they both looked to him for amusement and excitement. That this was partly her own fault Roberta knew vaguely, but resolutely she insisted to herself that she had been justified, even now when the demands of her newest friend made her feel reluctant and a little fearful.

Jack was growing impatient and insistent. Would she agree or would she not? And how had it come about that Jack held such importance in her life?

She was utterly weary of this island and this life she told herself, and yet at that moment how bright and sparkling the island looked. How lovely the countryside round about!

And where, she thought, would she get two people like her aunt and her father under one roof, ready and willing to do anything for each other and for her? Yes, now that it came to screwing up her courage to take the step that would sever her, maybe forever, from them, with all their faults and errors in their treatment of her, Roberta hesitated. What would it be like to be quite alone in the world with Jack?

"Roberta?" called her aunt's voice from the hall. "Where are you?"

"Here," Roberta answered with a start. "Come to my room, Auntie." She heard her aunt's quick, decided footsteps, then the door opened and she came in.

"Your father's bent on having his young engineers out for the week-end. He wants to talk over his plans with them and have them know Sir George better. He said you would know just what to do, and where to send the invitations. He wants you Brownie, and a man called Arlent, another called McAvoy, two cousins of the same name, Tom and Terry Haughton and an older man, McBurney. He said you were to ask Roger Dunham, too, and list for the afternoon and to stay to supper, he'd like you to ask a few lassies to make it pleasant for the men." Then she hesitated. "Roberta, it would please your father something awful if you would put yourself out a bit for these young men. He takes pride in his daughter, you know." She looked at the girl a little wistfully. "He sets a great store by you, my lass."

Roberta turned abruptly away. Somehow she could not face her aunt, but she said pleasantly enough, "Why, of course, Aunt Aggy, I'll do what I can. But after tea on Sunday," she hesitated and then went on, "I have an engagement, and you'll have to manage the rest by yourself."

"You couldn't break it, I suppose? It may be fanciful of me, but I have a kind of feeling that he—Rob I mean—will be disappointed if you are not there. You see the young men will be going Sunday night."

"Oh!" exclaimed Roberta. "They generally stay until Monday morning."

"This time they are all going Sunday night and on Monday there's a jaunt to the construction works, with Sir George driving your father. It'll be your father's first try at going out in a car."

Roberta faced about and looked at her aunt. "Do you—Does Sir George think there is any danger—for Father?"

"Well," admitted her aunt, "they say not. I can see, however, that having dived the robbers so cleverly, it'll maybe make those black-hearted rogues that are left so angry that they're like to get into any mischief they can. At least that's what I think Sir George is anxious about. For the lad's anxious, no matter what they say before me, and he was awful particular that I should tell you."

Roberta's heart contracted with fear and anger combined. Though Aunt Aggy gave her the message in all innocence, Roberta was sure Sir George's intention that she should be told was not so innocent. He was somehow, without any justification as far as she could see, except his fear of what Jack might say against him, determined to throw some sort of slur or suspicion on Jack, if he possibly could. Probably wanted to influence Dad against him, and so prevent his believing anything Jack said.

Then quite suddenly she thought of her father's danger. It was a new sensation for Roberta to be afraid for anyone, yet she could not dismiss her fears lightly this time. There had been danger to Sir George, the other day, though she laughed at the idea. She could not bear to think of her father being in any danger when she—

"Oh, Aunt Aggy, can't we persuade Dad not to go?"

Aunt Aggy's sharp blue eyes softened. "This girl did have some feeling, after all. She did care about her father." "Well, I don't know, my dear. I don't really think Rob will do anything for me just now, but," and she eyed the girl eagerly and shrewdly, "there's no telling what he might not do for you, or if not he, there's Sir George."

"Sir George will do nothing for me."

"Well, I'd not be quite as positive of that as you are. You forget, my dear, that you always approach him with a lifted poker, as you might say, and remembering that he's a poor young man and that you're a rich young woman to whom he cannot exactly be as up and coming as some others—why there's no telling."

"Aunt Aggy," said Roberta, amused in spite of herself and a little exasperated, "are you trying to tell me that I don't know how to interpret Sir George's manner to me? If you are you may save yourself the pains. He's not only looked things, but he's said things."

"Did he so?" her aunt questioned, her eyes screwing up with mirth. "Well, that's hopeful. There's never a lad would go to the trouble of insulting a good looking lass, unless he wanted to attract her attention." She rose briskly. "I must be off to my ordering. Thank you, my dear."

It was not until her aunt's footsteps were far distant down the stairs that Roberta moved. Then she put her modern head down on her desk and cried in a good old-fashioned way.

Lady Sandison passed her steps coming in with the evening papers.

"I say, Aggy, when you've time there's no end of a treat in store for you. You should read the different accounts of our little excitement in these odd American papers, especially the country ones. I mean to clip some of them and send them to Haviland and Uncle Charles."

But in the library he forgot to read or clip, for on turning over the pages of one of the papers his eye caught a name he knew. He stared, unable to believe his eyes. There it was, however, under marriage licenses:

"Roberta Jean MacBeth, MacBeth's Island, Pa., and John V. Navarro, Philadelphia, Pa."

Was it just one of Nicaragua Jack's tricks, or did Roberta know and consent? He had been unable to trace any connection between Nicaragua Jack and the bandits captured or at large, and that fact had kept him silent. But now—what was he to do! Hastily he tore the list from the paper and thrust it in his pocket.

CHAPTER XI

The week-end party was in full swing. Roberta moved among a group of men, some of them new, some of them old acquaintances, but all likable. Her father, for the first time since his illness—indeed for the first time since Roberta had flouted his island—was really enjoying himself. Sir George, Roberta told herself jealously, was treated like a favored son. He was gay and charming, and as her Aunt Aggy took care to let her know "looked like one of those old gods."

"My dear aunt," Roberta protested, "you talk of nothing else but Sir George from morning until night."

"It can't be as bad as all that," her aunt exclaimed, evidently alarmed. "This is the first time I have spoken about Sir George this day. There's something about the way you listen."

"There must be!" declared the mad-dened Roberta. "I'll take care to change that something, for you may as well know, now as later, that I'm sick of the sound of Sir George's name on your lips."

"Dear, dear! Have I done that for the lad! I'm terrible sorry, Roberta. I wouldn't have had that happen for a great deal. You see, it's only the last few days that I've known how he feels about you, and maybe that's why

What "Pinchotism" Means

When Gifford Pinchot became Governor he found the State burdened with an appropriation liability of nearly $32,000,000 with only $31,000 in the General Fund to meet it. At the end of his Administration he left a balance in the State Treasury of over $20,000,000 — — millions above all liabilities.

During Pinchot's Administration:—

85% of the State's income went back to the people in good roads and appropriations for their schools, hospitals, etc.

Enactment of the Administrative Code completely reorganized the State Government and assembled more than 100 independent spending agencies under 18 departments and 3 independent Commissions.

The Budget was established, paving the way for adequate financial control.

2372 miles of good road were constructed, and nearly $200,000,000 was expended upon road work without a breath of scandal.

The Department of Public Instruction handled more than a hundred and twenty-five million dollars on the pay-as-you-go plan, at 5% less cost of administration than during the preceding 4 years, while the State's contributions to teachers' salaries in the poorer districts were increased 50% to 75%.

Nearly $800,000,000 of questionable or fraudulent securities were shut out of Pennsylvania.

More progress was made toward the purification of streams than in the entire previous history of the State, and agreements were entered into with New York, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky to prevent stream pollution.

Many of our best laws were enacted in protection of our dairymen, our farmers, and the food supply of our people, and in safeguarding the workers in our industries. Likewise, broadening amendments were made to our Workmen's Compensation and other labor legislation.

Those are but examples. A Governor who thus devotes himself to the interests of the entire State and its people, is cordially hated by those few large corporations which gouge the public with extortionate rates, or have looked to professionalized politics for special privileges. These are the interests now picturing Mr. Pinchot as an enemy of all business, and a menace to investments, because he promises to correct such dishonesties.

Mr. Pinchot's four years in office, his accomplishments in spite of the financial handicap, and his plain statements in this campaign, refute that libel. In the Primary the Republican voters of Pennsylvania nominated him as their candidate for Governor. The staunch Republicanism of this State, as well as the best interests of the Commonwealth and its citizens, demand that you elect him and all the other Republican nominees. To do so—

State Governmental
Budget System

bills he has already approved. The final total of all must be brought within the estimate of revenue. To do this it is often necessary to veto bills in total or in part because of "insufficient state revenue." The final approval of all bills establishes the Budget for the ensuing two years.

The Budget System has functioned in aiding the Governor prepare his receipts estimates and appropriation recommendations. It has provided the General Assembly with any information and assistance it requested. It has operated in enabling the Governor to determine the amount of the Budget for the succeeding fiscal biennium. Beginning June 1st, it takes up the duty of controlling expenditures.

After the appropriation bills are signed the Governor allocates to various departments, boards and commissions portions of the appropriations to the Department of Property and Supplies for the purchase of supplies, equipment, motor vehicles, surety bonds, insurance, and the payment of rentals for offices or other space leased outside the Capitol or outside of Harrisburg. This duty is conferred upon him by Section 701 (h) of the Administrative Code.

Under various provisions of the Administrative Code, the Department of Property and Supplies is given the power, with a few exceptions, of:

1. Purchasing all supplies including Office and Miscellaneous Supplies, Printing, Binding, Food and Forage, Fuel, Repairs and everything of a supply nature.
2. Purchasing all Office, Miscellaneous and Motor Equipment.
3. Purchasing all Surety Bonds covering State employees for whom bonds are authorized.
4. Purchasing all insurance covering possible personal or property damage by State-owned motor equipment.
5. Entering into agreement on the part of the State for all offices, garages, or other space to be leased by the State, for all of the departments, boards and commissions of the State government.

To do this the General Assembly appropriates to the Department of Property and Supplies certain lump sum appropriations. These appropriations the Governor allocates among the several departments, boards and commissions after which each allocation becomes expendable in the same manner as an appropriation. Incidentally, it may be pointed out that this arrangement, properly controlled through the Budget System, provides a flexibility of funds, controlled by the Governor, which can be applied with facility to meet governmental emergencies which may arise.

The principle of granting lump sum appropriations has become a policy of the General Assembly since the establishment of the Budget System. The General Assembly says how much and for what. The Governor, through the Budget System, says when and where.

In all of his allocation and subdivision of appropriated amounts, the Governor is restricted to the total amount of the appropriation and to the purposes stated by the Act of Assembly. He is just as responsible to the people for the proper execution of appropriation laws as for other statutes and the manner of his execution of the statutes determines the quality of his administration.

Convalescent Home To Open On November 22

and for that reason so little is being done along the convalescent line for infants.

The greatest asset of any nation is its children, and if they are not strong and vigorous the nation suffers.

The home at Langhorne was started last year, and has, up to the present time, been supported by voluntary gifts. Despite the general financial depression which began soon after the home was opened the work has been wonderfully blessed. Kind friends have given a helping hand just when it was needed most, and the home is now firmly established. Funds for running expenses are required as the home will soon be filled with children that are in need of medical care and attention.

The slogan adopted by the home is: "Home, Health and Happiness, for Every Child." And last but not least, the spiritual development of the children is carefully, and prayerfully encouraged.

The public is cordially invited to have a part in building up strong future citizens. The names of members, Nassau, M. D., Wilmer Krusen, M. D., of the medical board are published herewith: Curtis C. Eves, M. D., Philadelphia. Orthopedic: Howard Reed, M. D., Philadelphia.

Consultants: John Porter Scott, M. D., Philadelphia. Visiting physicians: Henry Lovett, M. D., D. H. Brooker Mills, M. D., James H. McKee, M. D., Edwin E. Graham, M. D., M. D., and S. L. Ridge, M. D., Langhorne. Harriet L. Hartley, M. D., Charles F. Horne.

BRISTOL HIGH ELEVEN WILL OPPOSE AMBLER

By Leon Schiffer

With almost half the schedule completed Coach Kenneth Townsend has started whipping his charges into shape for the remaining six games. Ambler is Bristol's next opponent, while games with Bordentown, Sellersville-Perkasie, Springfield, Bensalem, and Morrisville follow.

To date the Cardinal and Gray is sporting a fairly good record, and all indications lead to the establishment of a better record than last year when they emerged victorious in four tilts, tied three, and lost four. Counting Friday's fray with Doylestown High at Doylestown, the Bristol eleven has two triumphs to its credit and two defeats.

For the third, straight year Doylestown ruined Bristol's hopes and prayers of a victory over the Doylestown eleven. The defeat, however, has been forgotten and the Bristol boys are ready to redeem themselves against Ambler when they meet on the local gridiron tomorrow.

Coach Townsend has confidence in his squad and is expecting big things from it. The loss of Joe Aita for Friday's game is due to the seniors' trip to Washington and has left quite a gap at the center position. However, Aita will, no doubt, be supplanted at center by Blanche.

At the right halfback position, Bristol has one of the leading line crushers in Bucks County. "Hokey" Leighton, 145-pound well built lad, is playing a better game than he did the previous years. Leighton has been one of the most reliable ground-gainers on the team and instrumental in virtually all the points garnered by the Cardinal and Gray.

Townsend is fortunate in having fast and scrappy backfield men who are able to hold their own whenever rushed into the fray. Pieo is an experienced signal-barker; Tentlueci, Cole, Gaffney, and Leighton are capable halfbacks, while Bornice and Laferty are brilliant fullbacks.

Bristol again is flashing a powerful line. Five of the seven men are veterans, while the remaining two won their jobs from a strong field. Due to minor injuries, "Peck" Wright will probably not see action for several days. "Plug" Gallagher and Joe Britton are taking care of their regular guard post, while Collins and Neindorff had very little trouble gaining their varsity berths. The competition for left end has been very keen between Eposito and Tulio, while Dougherty is virtually assured of his position as right end.

The starting line-up for tomorrow is as follows: Ends, Tulio and Dougherty; tackles, Collins and Neindorff; guards, Britton and Gallagher; center, Blanche; quarterback, Pieo; halfbacks, Leighton and Gaffney; fullback, Bornice.

A large crowd is expected to turn out to cheer the home team on to victory when the local eleven trots out to the field at 3.45 p. m. It would also be appreciated by the players if the public would keep in back of the ropes.

Quick, according to the evidence given at a trial before Justice Edward Lynn, drove up to the gas station of Bilger's store, Newportville, and asked for a gallon of gasoline. He stated that his car was down the road. After getting the gallon of gasoline Quick drove to the Bilger station and ordered five gallons and then increased this order to 10 gallons.

After the 10 gallons had been put into the tank he jumped into the car and drove away without paying the bill, it is alleged. Mrs. Bilger got his license number and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Quick is now under bail for court.
